POINTS FROM THE MESSAGE.

President HARRISON favors—

Making offices against the treaty rights of foreigners in this country cognizable in the federal courts. Suggested by the New Orleans affair.

A judicial construction of the rights of the United States where vessels violate the neutrality laws in the interest of parties not recognized as belligerents. This knows out of the law case.

Temporary provision for the admission of Chinese laborers and laborers in connection with the World's fair.

A guaranty of the construction bonds of the Nicaragua Canal company, to an amount necessary for its completion.

Legislation to place labor contracts on the West India islands under the supervision of a United States court commissioner.

Improvement of the harbor of Pearl river in Hawaii, and its equipment as a naval station.

Non-interference with the present silver and tariff laws.

Additional and liberal appropriations for the army and navy.

The adoption of a smokeless powder and modern rifles.

Limitation of the right of the supreme court to review felony cases except where constitutional questions are involved.

An appropriation for a female reform school in the District of Columbia.

Legislation to remedy the defects in the law to prevent Chinamen coming to this country.

A stringent code relating to crimes against chastity in the District of Columbia.

Extension of the free delivery mail system to towns of 5,000 inhabitants.

Education of Indian children in mixed schools.

Representation of the five civilized Indian tribes in Congress.

A deficiency appropriation to open up the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations to settlement.

Appropriation for the early completion of the census.

Reimbursement by the United States of ownership in water sources and reservoir sites.

Non-surrender of the power of the government over the subject of polygamy in Utah.

Town governments in Alaska.

Adequate appropriation for the civil service commission.

Legislation to protect the lives of railroad employees.

A constitutional amendment to secure uniformity in the choice of presidential electors—or to prevent "Michiganizing."

A non-partisan commission to consider plans to correct evils of our election system.

The President is absolutely silent on the subject of reciprocity, and this exclusion extends to the word itself. On the tariff and silver questions, he contends himself with a substantial repetition, in addition to a synopsis of the treasury report, of his utterances in his speeches. There is no hint about a veto in case Congress passes a free coinage act, and altogether Mr. Harrison treats the subject in a rather more conservative tone than was to have been expected.

The flaming war declarations toward Chili that the correspondents have been predicting as a startling feature of the message dwindle down to a few diplomatic expressions, more peaceable than belligerent. There is, indeed, very little "Michiganizing" in the document, which is as spiritless on the subject of foreign relations as the most Quakerish of WAXMAKER'S Pennsylvania constituents could wish. It is quite easy to see that Mr. BLAINE in the construction of the message had very little to do. Even the glory of the apothecary of the American book abroad is thrown upon the agricultural department.

Mr. HARRISON is evidently well satisfied with the pension business, both in itself and in the methods of administration, and points proudly to "the gratifying fact that the persons to whom these pensions are given are men who rendered not slight but substantial service," as though there never was a fraudulent claim nor a bogus pensioner.

The chief magistrate appears to be very much exercised about the action of the state of Michigan in adopting the plan of choosing presidential electors by congressional districts, and goes into an undignified and unbecoming political argument concerning it, which he might, if he chose, set a few pointers from the behavior of his party in New York, Pennsylvania, Iowa and many other states, to say nothing of that of his own appointees in the territory of Utah. The suggestion of a commission to propose a plan for the correction of the evils growing out of the exercise of the rights of suffrage, is right enough in itself, but the President's own notion represented by those planks of propriety and salute of an enfranchised American people, the majority of the Utah commission!

HOW DO THEY LIKE IT?

THE HERALD imagines that its Republican friends in this territory, and especially those of the Mormon faith, will discover a bad taste in their mouths this morning before finishing the President's message. It isn't much that HARRISON says regarding Utah, but that little is sufficient to convey the information that he takes no stock in the political movement which has recently taken place here, and furthermore that he has very slight faith in the honesty and sincerity of the Mormon people in their professed abandonment of polygamy. He gives them no credit for what they have done, but says their compliance with the law is due to the fact that they have come to the conclusion "that resistance is unprofitable and unavailing." He is emphatic in the declaration that Congress should not lose its absolute control over the territory until it has satisfactory evidence that the people will not return to their former practices, and says:

"The question is not whether these people now obey the laws of Congress against polygamy, but rather would they make, enforce and maintain such laws themselves if absolutely free to regulate the subject. We cannot afford to experiment with this subject for when a state is once constituted, the act is final, and any mistake is irremediable. No compact in the enabling act could in my opinion, be binding or effective."

Of course this cuts no figure in the affairs of Utah. The casting of doubt by the President upon the honesty of the people will have no effect upon those people, or at least not the effect to make them insecure and dishonest. As a church the Mormons have forbidden polygamy. As individuals they have ceased to marry polygamously. These are facts which cannot be gained by the President, however meanly he may stir the people who have finally accepted the laws and conformed their conduct to the sentiment of the American people.

The purpose of the President is apparent, and that aim is inspired by the fact that he retains the attitude which he and his party have so long held, refusing to recognize the changed conditions. He apprehends a movement for statehood, and would put obstacles in the way. Inasmuch as statehood is something concerning which very few people here are in the least ex-closed, he is wasting effort. Nevertheless he confesses his hatred of the Mormons, and in language which we imagine they will not fail to understand, says to Congress that he regards the Saints as a band of hypocrites who should be held under surveillance lest with the freedom of Americans they turn criminals.

THE HERALD does not apprehend that either the Gentile or Mormon Republican friends will "point with pride" to the Utah reference in the message, or that they will use the paragraph as a campaign document.

OMINOUS.

There is an ominous omission in the President's message. It will be recalled that in a previous message he took strong ground in favor of the admission of the territories, and in his swinging-round-the-circle speeches last spring he seemed never to tire when boasting of the fact that six of the dependencies had been erected into states during his administration. In the abstract it is something to be proud of, and a little manifestation of pride on the part of the President ought not to be regarded as out of place. When we reflect, however, on the manner in which those territories were admitted to the union, and on why they were made states we are less disposed to give the President credit for laudable motives in what he did. Rather are he and his party deserving of censure.

Justice and right had not the least influence in directing their action. They cared nothing for the people. Partisan politics alone controlled them. They did not even take into account the ability of the communities to maintain a state government. Would the new states return Republican Senators? Would they choose Republican Presidential electors? These were the questions which HARRISON and his party asked, and getting affirmative answers from six of the territories the half dozen were rushed into the union. Whereas the two which gave negative replies were kept out, although the latter were in every respect better qualified for the duties and responsibilities of statehood than were some of those which were admitted. The partiality emphasized in the cases of Idaho and Wyoming. The former was Democratic so far as the popular vote was concerned, and would, therefore, choose Senators and Presidential electors of that political faith. That obstacle must be overcome, and this was how it was done: The territory was disfranchised, chiefly Democrats were disfranchised, thus leaving the President's party largely in the majority. The excuse for this was that the disfranchised were Mormons and could not safely be entrusted with citizenship. This plea, flimsy and ludicrous as it was, might have passed with some degree of success if it had been employed further; but when the party came to cross the line into Wyoming it found that the Mormons were largely in the habit of voting the Republican ticket, and to disfranchise them there would be to make the state Democratic. The proposition to deny the ballot to Mormons in Wyoming was as abhorrent to HARRISON and his party as it had been to permit them to enjoy the privilege of suffrage in Idaho.

Thus is seen the hollowness of the President's boast regarding the admission of the territories.

Now it is noted that HARRISON has nothing to say about letting the territories in, notwithstanding his deep solicitude two years ago. Two of the dependencies are well prepared for taking on the new and more important conditions and responsibilities, and it is known that they will at once apply for admission to the union; but they are Democratic, hence HARRISON has no use for them and says nothing. We say this omission is ominous. It portends opposition on the part of the President and his party to the admission of Arizona and New Mexico. If the opposition shall be asserted our ambitious neighbors will be held back a couple of years, until a Democratic administration can let them in.

SENATOR KYLE, of South Dakota, writes of himself in the Congressional Directory, as follows: "JAMES HENDERSON KYLE, of Aberdeen, was born near Xenia, Ohio, February 24, 1854; entered the University of Illinois in 1871, but left in 1873 to enter Oberlin college; he was graduated from the classical course in 1878; prepared for admission to the bar, but afterward entered the Western Theological seminary at Allegheny, Pa., graduating in 1882; was pastor of Congregational churches at Chicago and Salt Lake City, Utah, from 1883 to 1885; since then has resided at Ipswich and Aberdeen, S. D."

Mr. Reed at Middletown, Conn., last week on his way to Washington, being asked why Connecticut's three Congressmen supported Mr. Kyle, replied that "Connecticut's workingmen are in favor of free trade, and vote with the Democrats every time."

THE CHICAGO World's fair directors, as we are by the papers there, have almost decided to ask for an appropriation from Congress of $5,000,000 rather than to request a loan of the same amount. They prefer that.

THERE'S MIGHTY little show for condemnation in the business of Congress, when there are only ten editors against 218 lawyers. We are glad to see that the 151-second contains, however, only one blacksmith.

CHAIRMAN CLARKSON says "the hope of the Republican party lies in a stalwart Republican press." If he had said the hope of the Republican press is in a stalwart Republican lie, he would have hit it exactly.

I recognized it at once as a herb that the Mexicans used to give us in the early 50's for bowel troubles. (I came to California in 1858) and I knew it would help me and it has. For the first time in years I can sleep well and my system is regular and in splendid condition. The old Mexican herbs in this remedy are a certain cure in constipation and bowel troubles." Ask for
